

I remember remembering to remember.

I remember

And then I forgot.

I remembered a bearded man wearing a dazzling dress,
+ sitting with words that matter ~ then + now.

I remember a woman making endless cups of tea, a woman wrapped in salmon skins,

A guy fucking a guy, holes drilling wall, a porcupine man, a pogo bouncing bouncer, row of clowns, solemn perfection small man and Mary's hair, unwrapped and unfurled, just for my eyes to see.

I remember two lovers sleeping surrounded by tarred mass filth, I remember silence + stillness + baked beans + naked in a dog brace / round love face love + pins in a cock + blood revealing blade + timber fall + heap breathing soil + flag pinned skin + and body fat soap wash + laughing + crying + drinking + then I forgot ~

I remember remembering to remember.

I remember

And then I forgot.

I remember remembering.

I remember feeling at home and knowing what home sick tastes like, + endless nights of haunted replays + hand breeze moving and that smell, I remember that smell then I forgot remembering because it's all in the now.

It's all been the very near future ~ because the future is now.

Michael Mayhew
2008
made in art