

Theatre picks of the week

National Review Of Live Arts, Glasgow

Alastair MacLennan,
part of the National Review Of Live Art

It's 30 years since the first National Review Of Live Arts, but if the festival has grown up into a mature, well-rounded adult under the direction of Nikki Milican, it's never lost its playful sense of adventure and brilliantly willful determination to push at the boundaries and explore new territories. To celebrate the 30th anniversary, some of the artists who have appeared over the past three decades have been invited back with new and old pieces, and to reflect on, discuss and interrogate developments in performance and live art. It is an extraordinary lineup which includes work from Forced Entertainment, Alastair MacLennan, Anne Seagrave, Curious, Forkbeard Fantasy, David Gale, Geraldine Pilgrim, Ron Athey, Francesca Steele, Kira O'Reilly, Julia Bardsley, La Ribot and many more. An unmissable event.

The Arches and various venues, Wed to 21 Mar, visit newmoves.co.uk

Lyn Gardner